3 Questions

3.0.1 Question 1: (60 Points)

3.1 Game Character and Hero Hierarchy

3.1.1 Objective:

You will create a superclass named `GameCharacter` and a subclass named `Hero`, which extends the functionality of `GameCharacter`. You'll use conditional statements and loops to manage the character's actions and interactions with other characters in a game-like scenario.

Tasks:

1. GameCharacter Class (15 Points):

- Create a superclass named `GameCharacter` with the following attributes:
 - `name` (string)

- `health` (integer)
 - `attack_power` (integer)
 - Implement an `__init__` method that initializes a `GameCharacter` with `name`, `health`, and `attack_power`.
 - Include the following methods in the `GameCharacter` class:
 - `display_info()`: Prints the character's `name`, `health`, and `attack_power`.
 - `take_damage(damage)`: Reduces the character's `health` by the `damage` amount and prints the character's updated `health`. If the `health` falls to or below 0, print that the character has fainted.
 - `attack(other_character)`: Causes this character to attack another character. This should reduce the other character's health by this character's `attack_power` and print the action.
2. Hero Class (15 Points):
- Create a subclass named `Hero` that inherits from `GameCharacter`. Add the following additional attributes:
 - `special_power` (string)
 - `special_attack_power` (integer)
 - `mana` (integer)
 - Override the `__init__` method to initialize the new attributes as well as the inherited ones.
 - Override the `display_info()` method to include all the attributes from the `Hero` class.
 - Implement a `use_special_attack(other_character)` method that allows the `Hero` to use their special power to deal `special_attack_power` damage to `other_character`. However, this can only be done if the `Hero` has at least 10 mana points (costs 10 mana to use the special attack). If they don't have enough mana, print a message that they cannot use their special power.
 - Implement a `mana_regen(amount)` method that regenerates the `Hero`'s mana points by the specified `amount` and prints the updated mana level.
3. Battle Simulation (15 Points):
- Implement a `battle(other_character)` method for the `Hero`. In this method:
 - The `Hero` will repeatedly attack the `other_character` using either regular attacks or the special attack (if enough mana) until one of the characters' health reaches zero.
 - Use a loop to perform the turn-based attack sequence, where both characters take turns attacking each other. The `Hero` will always attack first.
 - On each turn, print out the current health of both characters.
 - The loop should stop when one character's health is zero or less, and the method should declare the winner.

“4. Testing Your Code (15 Points): - Create a `Hero` and a `GameCharacter` instance. Demonstrate the use of all methods including: - Taking and dealing damage. - Using the `Hero`'s special attack when enough mana is available. - Simulating a battle between the two characters.” For Example: - `hero1 = Hero("Knight", 120, 25, "Sword Slash", 50, 30)` - `villain1 = GameCharacter("Goblin", 80, 15)`

Run the `battle()` method to simulate a battle between the hero and the villain. Observe how the game dynamics, conditionals, and loops manage the flow of the battle.

3.1.2 Question 2: (40 Points)

3.2 Dice Battle Game

You have to create a simple turn-based Dice Battle Game where two players (user inputs) compete against each other. The game will use user input for choices, conditionals to control the game flow, and loops to manage the rounds until a player wins.

Game Description:

- Both players will start with an initial health of 100.
- Each round, players will take turns rolling a dice (random number between 1 and 6).
- The dice roll result will determine how much damage the other player takes.
- Players will have the option to “heal” (regain some health) instead of attacking, but they can only heal once every 3 turns.
- The game continues until one player’s health drops to 0 or below.

3.2.1 Tasks:

1. Player Class (15 Points):

- Create a class named Player with the following attributes:
 - name (string): The player's name.
 - health (integer): The player's starting health, initialized to 100.
 - can_heal (boolean): A flag to track if the player is allowed to heal (they can heal only once every 3 turns).
 - heal_counter (integer): Tracks the number of turns since the player last healed.
- Implement the following methods:
 - roll_dice(): Simulates a dice roll and returns a random number between 1 and 6.
 - attack(other_player): Rolls the dice and deals the dice value as damage to the other player.
 - heal(): Allows the player to heal by a random value between 10 and 30 health points. The player can only heal once every 3 turns. If they can heal, reset can_heal to False and heal_counter to 0.
 - end_turn(): Increments the heal_counter. If it reaches 3, set can_heal to True so the player can heal again.

2. Game Loop (15 Points):

- Create a loop to alternate between two players' turns.
- On each turn:
 - Ask the current player whether they want to attack or heal.
 - Perform the selected action (attack the other player or heal).
 - Print the current health of both players after each turn.
 - If a player's health reaches 0 or below, the game ends and declares the other player the winner.

3. User Input (10 Points):

- Use input statements to take the players' names at the beginning.
- Use input on each turn to ask whether the player wants to attack or heal.
